About GIA

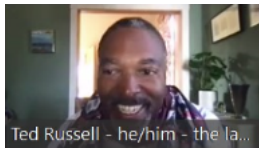

A national network of private, public, and corporate arts and culture funders, Grantmakers in the Arts (GIA) provides leadership and service that advances the use of philanthropic and governmental resources to support the growth of arts and culture.

Through conferences, workshops, podcasts, and webinars; publications including the GIA Reader; research and policy work across the field of grant-making; and digital communication tools on our website and social media; we strive to better inform funding practices and effectively address the urgent needs facing artists, arts educators, and arts and culture organizations in communities across America.

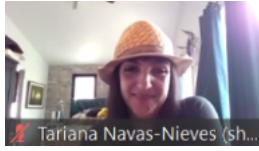

With a diverse member base including private, family, community, and corporate foundations; national, state, and local governmental agencies, and nonprofit national, regional, and local funders and service agencies, GIA is the only national association of private and public funders that make grants to artists and arts organizations in America.

Letter from the Chair

In 2021, GIA worked to manifest our vision for the future of our field and to complement our learning with action. GIA's vision for the future is one in which our field have become investors in culture – broadening the means and tools of support and who receives support. Toward making that vision a reality, GIA has engaged the national grantmaking field on the Solidarity Economy and how to support it. In 2021, GIA released our commissioned Solidarity Not Charity: Arts & Culture Grantmaking in the Solidarity Economy report to broad national attention and influence. GIA has since partnered on Art. Coop 's Study into Action and Move the Money, a series of funder discussions in which scholars, advocates, organizers, and artists make tangible the principles laid out in the report to more directly influence change in grantmakers' practices.

GIA's vision includes our field's increasing advocacy for changes to public policy and practice. GIA and our Arts Education Funders Coalition influenced Rep. Suzanne Bonamici's Arts Education for All Act, the broadest arts education policy bill ever introduced in Congress. The bill supports and encourages the offering of arts education and programming experiences to our youngest learners, K-12 students, and youth impacted by the juvenile justice system. The bill also includes provisions that would allow for rigorous arts and arts education research to be carried out, to further inform how elementary and secondary education in our country is improved.

GIA has engaged Jen Cole and Estrella Esquilin of the National Collaborative for Creative Work at ASU's Herberger Institute for Design and the Arts, in collaboration with Randy Engstrom of Third Way Creative, to co-create a Cultural Policy Learning Lab series focused on advancing racial justice through intersectional cultural policy and will serve as a first step toward realizing the recommendations in the GIA-commissioned report, Opportunities at the Intersections: Advancing Racial Equity via Arts and Culture in the Public Sector.

As always, central to our values is racial equity. GIA moved our Racial Equity in Arts Funding workshops online, increasing participation by over 100%, with each workshop selling out immediately. GIA also furthered this work by co-designing an advanced GIA Pro-BIPOC Arts Funding Community of Practice workshop with Hillombo Consulting, which guides participants through the design of experiments in pro-BIPOC arts grantmaking.

GIA partnered with ArtPlace America to present Future of the Field: Cross-Sector Creative Placemaking Series, a series of "response-pieces" to ArtPlace's analysis from individuals and practitioners across the field of creative placemaking, presented alongside ArtPlace's analyses.

We've developed these projects as complements to our ongoing webinars, podcasts, blog posts, workshops, and our annual conference because we know our field needs both learning and action. Thank you to our members, our funding partners, our board of directors, and the members of our team. We look forward to working with you to co-create our future.

YOUTH VOICES LEADING FOR RACIAL JUSTICE - SESSION

“ This cumulative national trauma and mobilization to protest injustice were really interwoven with the arts sector’s collective responsibility to critically examine the role that we play in creating and maintaining systems that drive inequity. The events of the last two years asked us to really consider if the progress that we made was truly equitable, then why and how is it so easily undone? ”

“ KEYNOTE

When the foundations come into play, they don't go into the communities and talk to people, ask them: What do you need? How can we support? How can we invest? How can I help you? How to create sustainable ways of funding that are not just momentaneous.

SACHA ANTONETTY

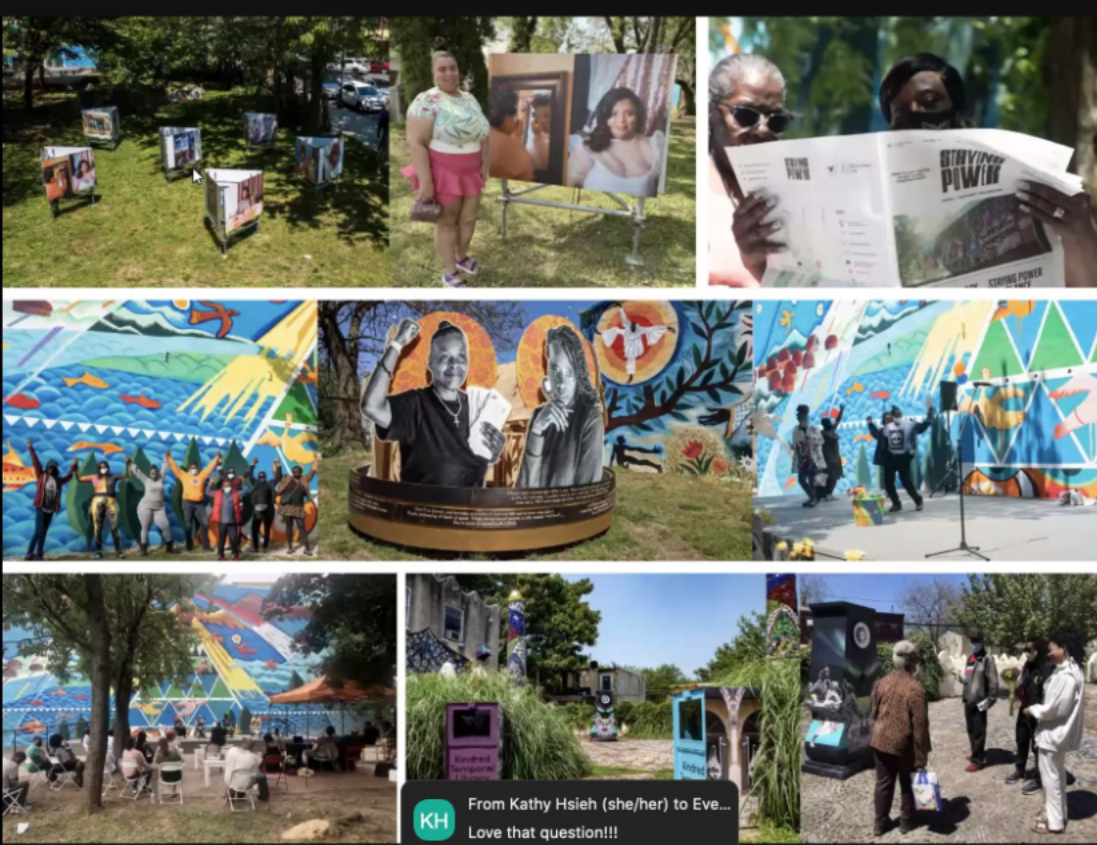

“ KEYNOTE

Grantmakers have a very particular role to play in making sure that our democracy stands. When we say "democracy", I'm not talking about politics but the freedom of artists to express their points of view to be critical of what is happening in the world.

Funding Partners are members who choose to make contributions above the amount required by the GIA dues structure.

Funding Partner gifts assist GIA with general operating support as well as designated programs, including the annual conference, the Arts Education Funders Coalition, and information and communication services.

The Leadership Circle is made up of funders making gifts of $10,000 and above. GIA especially acknowledges Funding Partners granting multi-year support. These contributors are essential to the development and sustainability of programs over time.
